Key boxes being installed in dorms

BY MATT ADRIAN
Campus Editor

New master key boxes are being installed into all the residence halls to give the fire department access to dorm rooms in case of a fire. Michael Doerr, construction project coordinator, said that all of the residence halls will have one of these boxes located near the front door. The boxes will hold the master key for the residence hall. The key to open the box is in a box in a fire engine and that box only can be opened by a radio signal from the central fire department. Doerr said physical plant employees were concerned with the safety of the boxes. He said the boxes will be built into the brick work of the residence halls and be hard to remove. Doerr said the boxes should be installed by the beginning of Christmas break. The project would

Budget requests top $1.7 billion

By PRISCILLA TINKER
Staff writer

Various Illinois state universities are requesting more than $1.7 billion from the state for operational and capital budgeting for fiscal year 1998 for operations, grants and capital improvements around campuses. The budget requests, which were submitted to the Illinois Board of Higher Education Tuesday, range from 5.9 percent more state funds requested from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville to a 14.7 percent increase at Chicago State University, said Debra Smitley, the associate director for public affairs for the IBHE. The requests are for operational and capital budgets. The operational budget covers all costs that are not included in the university's fixed costs. Fixed costs include heat, water and electricity bills, and faculty and staff salaries. The capital budgeting is financed through bonds from the Illinois General Assembly to help remodel facilities around campuses. Smitley said there has been no increases in the amount of bonds for two years because there must be a three-fifths vote in both the Illinois House of Representatives and the Senate for one to be passed.

"There hasn't been bond money available for the capital budget projects because the General Assembly hasn't increased the limit of bonds issued," Smitley said. Eastern has requested more than $67 million for its operational budget. This is a 9.5 percent increase from last year's budget. This increase is the second highest in the state. Of that $67 million, nearly $32 million is for the capital budget. Jill Nilsen, special assistant to Eastern President David Jorns, said last week the money from the capital budget will be used to help remodel Booth Library, the Fine Arts Center, accessibility improvements and the Life Science Building. According to a report issued by the IBHE, Chicago State University is requesting more than $50 million, which is $6 million more than this year's budget. "The reason for our request is because our full-time student equivalent (enrollment) has increased 63 percent, and our internal operational budget has only increased 23 percent," said Wayne Rath, who is from the Chicago State University Budgeting and Planning Office. The operational budget for Chicago State University includes technology enhancements, salary increases, student retention programs and improvements for undergraduate programs, Rath said. He said Chicago State University requested $23 million for its capital budgeting. Rath added the money will be used to remodel buildings, for technology enhancements, to reduce deferred maintenance and to increase classroom space. Western Illinois University requested more than $78 million for its operational and capital budgeting. This is a 9.5 percent increase over this year's request, which was which was more than $71 million.

"This request for funds includes a 6.5 percent increase in salaries for faculty and staff," said John Maguire, Western Illinois University spokesman. Also included in the budget is $2.69 million, which will be used for various equipment and operational projects, Maguire said. Maguire said the capital budget request for Western includes money appropriated for four major projects. The four

Community education to begin about emergency 911 system

By JODI SMITH
Staff writer

The Coles County 911 Board will begin educating residents and emergency responders about the 911 system. "(We must) educate the community on what a 911 call is," said Rex Roberts, chairman of the 911 board. "911 is only for an emergency." The board plans to visit schools in the county, including Eastern, to explain the system and answer citizens' and students' questions. Roberts said the plan also involves educating volunteer firemen and sheriff's deputies on how to respond to emergencies in rural areas. Roberts said he has contacted Douglas, Christian and Montgomery counties to inquire how they informed the public about their 911 systems. The Coles County 911 system will be "state-of-the-art" and include an enhanced grid system. The system will show the dispatcher exactly where the caller's house is located, Roberts said. The board decided to educate the public and rescue workers after people voiced opposition to the address changes. All residents whose addresses are going to be changed will be notified by mail by the end of November. Coles County residents voted in favor of installing the 911 system in April 1993. "(We are) implementing the wishes of the voters," Roberts said. Although members of the 911 board were appointed by the Coles County Board, 911 members serve on a voluntary basis. The rural areas in Coles County that face address changes are being handled by the 911 Board. The address changes in Charleston and Mattoon are being handled by each city. There were 800 address changes originally scheduled for Charleston, but after public opposition, the city council decided to reduce the number to 16 addresses. Those 16 address changes were requested by the residents at the addresses.

Father suspected of killing four children in their beds

LAURENS, S.C. (AP) – A millworker suspected of murdering his son and three stepchildren in their beds was found dead in a reservoir Monday after leaving a message for his estranged wife to pick up “four packages” at home.

Johnny Satterwhite, 37, apparently drowned himself after his wife discovered their children’s bodies, along with his note, Sunday afternoon.

“Basically it told her to have a Merry Christmas, used some profanity and said she would be alone in ‘97,” Laurens Police Chief Robin Morse said.

Satterwhite also asked his employer Friday to remove Bertha Satterwhite as beneficiary of his life insurance policy, Morse said. The couple, married about 12 years, had been separated at least a week.

Mrs. Satterwhite discovered the bodies of his son, 10-year-old Christopher, and his three stepchildren, 13-year-old Johnny Gary, 14-year-old Terrance Gary and 16-year-old Mary Gary, late Sunday.

She had been called by a mutual friend of the couple who told her to go to the family home, saying “there were four packages there for her” that had been left by Satterwhite, Morse said.

The boys had each been shot twice in the head and the girl was shot three times. All four were lying in their pajamas in bed.

Morse did not know an exact time of death, but said the children could have been killed as early as Thursday since they were not at school Friday.

A search of the small one-story brick and wood house turned up a 22-caliber revolver, which was bought Thursday at a local pawn shop, along with a box of low-noise bullets. Police also found Satterwhite’s note to his wife in the living room.

The friend who relayed Satterwhite’s message apparently was unaware of the killings, Morse said.

Warrants charging Satterwhite with murder were issued before his truck was found five miles north of Laurens on Monday. Police used bloodhounds to search the woods nearby, and Satterwhite’s body was pulled from the Clinton city reservoir a few hours later.

No cause of death had been determined, but there were no indications of foul play, Laurens County Coroner Zack Seymour said.

An autopsy was scheduled for Tuesday.

Satterwhite’s father, Luther Evans, said that he last saw his son two weeks ago and that the younger man gave no indication of any problems with his wife.

“I seen the children with him all the time,” Evans said.

“He’s a great father to those children.”

“It’s unbelievable, because you see them all the time,” said Helen Turner, who lives next door. “He was a hard-working man and they were an ideal family. That man would get out there in that yard over there and wrestle with those little boys. You couldn’t ask for a better father.” “This is just very hard to swallow,” said Brenzella Hill, who works at a laundry where Satterwhite often took the children.

30,000 crosses transforms field into symbolic ‘cemetery’

TREMONT, Ill. (AP) – The work begins shortly after dawn on a cold, windy Saturday: push a cross into the ground and move on, push a cross in and move on. For nearly eight hours, the band of abortion opponents keeps going.

When they finish to hold a brief prayer service, the group is one day closer to their goal of transforming a barren corn field into a “cemetery” dramatizing the cost of abortion.

With a few more days of work the cemetery will contain 30,000 crosses – one for each abortion performed in an average week across the country, the group says – arrayed in the shape of the United States.

“We’re basically trying to help people understand the enormity of the situation,” said volunteer Lori Ramirez. “When you say 30,000 abortions happen in a week ... it’s just a number. But when you see that many crosses and realize each cross represents a child, it’s pretty overwhelming.” The display is not pretty.

The crosses vary in size from 18 inches tall to just 5 or 6 inches. Some are white, others tan. Some even have bright red or yellow arms, the result of being made from the castoffs of a ruler manufacturer.

They stand next to I-155, about 15 miles south of Peoria. That means passersby will see them, but it also means the whoosh of traffic is constant.

Similar displays – dubbed Cemeteries of the Innocents by their sponsors – are a staple of the anti-abortion movement. They pop up on college campuses, state capitol lawns, church grounds. But most consist of a few hundred or few thousand crosses.

Organizers don’t make a big deal of it, but they say this may be the nation’s largest cross display.

Rebecca Lindstedt, a spokeswoman for the American Life League in Washington, doesn’t disagree.

“Thirty thousand! That’s a lot,” she said. “I’ve never heard of one that large.” An engineer mapped out the site so the display would look like the United States, said organizer Dan Smith of Central Illinois Right to Life. Volunteers make the crosses on weeknights. Then they put them in place on Saturdays – it will take all five Saturdays in November to do the job.

cost $5,000 to install. The fire department is providing the boxes.

Physical Plant Director Ted Weidner said the fire department suggested that the boxes be installed after an October 1994 fire in Carman Hall raised concern about the fire departments ability to get into dorm rooms.

According to a article in the Oct. 11 Daily

Eastern News, a fire gutted the sixth floor of Carman Hall causing 45 students to displaced for a month. The students were housed in residence hall lounges and vacant rooms until they could move back into their old rooms. The fire was caused by a curling iron left on a bed and incurred an estimated $100,000 in damage.

projects would include utility improvements, science building renovations, a combining of the Brooks Center, a center for African American students, and the Hispanic Student Center and renovations for a recital hall.

Illinois State University requested more than $124 million from the state, which is a 7 percent increase over this year's budget request.

According to Sue Harbak, an Illinois State University Budgeting and Planning Office employee, the $93 million operational budget request will be used to pay for increases in faculty and staff salaries and basic operations.

The remaining $31 million will be used for water system replacement, building remodeling and other campus improvements.

The University of Illinois at Champaign/Urbana has requested more than $26 million, which is a 6.5 percent increase.

According to Randy Kangas, from the University of Illinois Budgeting and Planning Office, the increase is needed to make faculty and staff salaries more competitive with other universities.

"Salaries at the Champaign/Urbana campus are 10 percent to 12 percent behind other universities," Kangas said.

The funds from the capital budget would also go to building repairs and renovations and to build an agriculture and consumer economics library, Kangas said.

According to the IBHE report, the other state universities that have requested funds from the state include: Northeastern Illinois University has requested almost $54 million, which is a 7.5 percent increase; Northern Illinois University requested a 8.9 percent increase, which is more than $154 million; and Southern Illinois University at Carbondale requested a 7.5 percent increase, which is almost $208 million.

Smitley said unlike state universities, private institutions receive money through private grants, not the state.

Illinois community colleges also requested more than $283 million, which is an increase of 8.8 percent from this year's budget. Funding for community colleges are made by joint requests from all the colleges.

Smitley said the IBHE will now start to look at all of the budget requests to determine their budget recommendations. They will then submit the recommendations to the General Assembly and Gov. Jim Edgar to review.

Meeting to discuss art integration

By CHRIS WISE
Staff writer

The Association of Childhood Education International will discuss how to integrate arts into the curriculum today.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Coleman Hall Auditorium. This is the last meeting of the year.

The featured speaker for the event, Helen Krehbiel-Reed, from Eastern’s music department, will share her research on early childhood development with music and its benefits for total learning and preparation for learning.

Krehbiel-Reed said her work with children and students has given her the knowledge to address this subject.

Thursday at Ike’s Tavern.

■ Daniel Beaudry, 19, of 2219 Ninth St., and Michael Kjeldsen, 19, of Worth, were cited with the purchase/acceptance of alcohol by a minor and the sale/gift of alcohol to a minor. Beaudry was also cited with the possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ David Beaudry, 20, of Worth, and Peter Panico, 19, of 264 Carman Hall were cited with the purchase/acceptance of alcohol by a minor. All four were cited at 2 a.m. Nov. 9 at 2219 Ninth St.

■ Lyndon Getty, 39, of Anchor, was cited at 11:52 p.m. Friday at 705 W. Lincoln Ave. with driving under the influence of alcohol and illegal transportation of alcohol.

Meeting with Edgar to be rescheduled

Governor to attend funeral

By MOLLY STEWARDSON
Staff writer

The Student Action Team canceled a trip to Springfield scheduled for Wednesday because Gov. Jim Edgar attended Cardinal Joseph Bernardin’s funeral.

The Student Action Team was going to meet with Edgar and other leadership in the house and senate to lobby from the student’s perspective, said Brian Anderson, student vice president for public affairs.

Anderson said he was going to meet with David Worshing, chair of appropriations committee.

Other members of the Student Action Team would have met with representatives from their home district.

Anderson said he thinks the university deserves more money from the state.

“We are letting the legislation know students care,” Anderson said.

Anderson said the students are concerned with deferred maintenance, faculty salaries and state-appropriated dollars.

Eastern has the highest amount of deferred maintenance, the lowest faculty salaries and the lowest state appropriated dollars per student, Anderson said.

He said there would be other groups from Eastern going to Springfield to lobby for money for the university.

The Student Action team decided not to go to Springfield on Wednesday because the original intent of the trip was to meet with the governor, Anderson said.

This was to be the first trip up to Springfield this year by the Student Action Team, Anderson said.

The Student Action Team has rescheduled their trip for Dec. 4.

Senate members need to be accountable, give reasons for resigning

Four Student Senate members resigned from their positions last week – and no one except Senate Speaker Jeff Zilch knows why.

Zilch said they all resigned, and that he did not and would not tell the student body why the elected officials stepped down from their positions.

“There is no policy where they have to submit a written or verbal form of resignation,” Zilch said. “If it is a personal reason, do you need to know that? No.”

He’s right. Students don’t have the right to know all the details, problems and personal conflicts in a senate member’s life. However, they do have the right to know if their elected representative resigned because of an academic, medical, time conflict or personal reason.

Senate members can be vague in explaining why they couldn’t complete their term in office and still protect themselves from exposing their personal life to the student body.

“I think if it’s that personal, then students don’t need to know everything,” said Student Body President Jason Anselment. “But there are ways to express the reason so it’s not that personal.”

Student senate members need to explain why they resign from their positions.

Since there is no current policy, the senate needs to add a bylaw that would make resigning senate members explain their resignation through a letter to the senate.

“It’s something we should definitely look at,” said Anselment in regards to a bylaw change. “Sometimes things are so common that they’re not written down and we don’t even no it.”

In the past, senate members have written letters of resignation. However, they didn’t have to – they simply wanted to say their farewells and give a last bit of advice to the existing senate, Anselment said.

Senate members need to be accountable to the student body when they are on the senate and when they are leaving it.

These elected student representatives need to answer to the students if they want to earn the respect of the student body.

Colleges around the country are struggling to find ways to increase diversity among students, but keep in accordance with laws that are sweeping the nation.

In California, for example, voters approved Proposition 209, which bars that state from using preferences based on gender or race. That means California colleges will no longer be able to admit students based solely on their sex or their race. That also means scholarships awarded to minorities and women are illegal.

In Texas this summer, the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that diversity was not a valid reason for race-based preferences and outlawed this type of admissions policy at a university. Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi are represented in the 5th district.

In Maryland, the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that a merit-based scholarship program at the University of Maryland for which only African-Americans are eligible was unconstitutional.

The court ruled that such a scholarship program could be valid only if strong evidence that past discrimination makes such a program necessary and that the program is tailored to reach that goal.

These rulings are setting precedents. They are saying that discrimination affects everyone, not necessarily the minority.

But if programs and scholarships that do look solely at minorities for admissions are being abolished, what do universities do to ensure that the rate of minority students grows or, at best, maintains at its current level?

Some universities in the state offer programs that target minorities for admissions.

NATALIE GOTT
Regular columnist

“... if courts are going to cut back race-based preference programs, schools need to be ready.”

Some of the programs are based solely for minorities. Others include all races.

A program at Western Illinois University has a program that allows students who do not meet standard admission requirements to enroll in a program called Chance. The program is similar to Eastern’s Gateway program except that students of all races are admitted.

“A vast majority of these students are students of color,” said LeRoy Mitchell, director of the Chance program.

Southern Illinois University offers a similar program. Illinois State University operates a program almost identical to Eastern’s Gateway program. Native Americans, Latino Americans, Asian Americans and African Americans that don’t meet standard admission criteria for the university can be admitted into a program called COAP.

“The trend now is not to be so specific to race,” said Jewel Gray, an academic coordinator and adviser at ISU. “I still think that there are racially-based issues that are still there and as long as they are there, there is still a need for this.”

And, she is right. But if courts are going to continue to cut back race-based preference programs, schools need to be ready. That doesn’t necessarily mean the universities need to eliminate current programs. But it does mean that schools need to have programs ready if that time comes.

Voting ‘no’ to proposed University College may rob students of service

Dear editor:

The Task Force on Lower Division Student Services proposed that an administrative structure be formed to improve academic services to undergraduate students at Eastern. This was one of three recommendations made in the task force’s report. Unfortunately, the focus of the debate has been on the name University College and the title of the administrator of the unit. Benefits to students with the implementation of these recommendations have been overlooked and overshadowed.

The proposed administrative structure is not a radical change from the current Office of Academic Development, which includes the Counseling Center, Academic Assistance Center, Testing Services and Disability Services. The proposed University College would include these academic service units and, in addition, administer Freshman Seminars, coordinate tutorial services and provide other support academic services for students. The task force recommended that the existing unit of Academic Development be maintained but that the unit augment its focus on student academic services. This is not a “big change.”

The task force delineated problems encountered by students as they matriculate at Eastern. One of the most significant problems students experience is second tier admission criteria to programs or majors. The task force learned that many students who are in good standing with the university are unable to continue in their selected majors because they do not meet program or major admission criteria. The task force discussed solutions to and management of problems which ensue from the second tier admission requirements. It was resolved that an administrative structure such as the proposed University College could facilitate counseling and advisement to assist these students in meeting the admission criteria or finding other potential majors. This is just one of many problems that the task force discussed. Others included consistent procedures for notifying students who were earning grades of D or F at midterm, coordination of tutorial services, and lack of peer tutoring opportunities.

Unfortunately, the discussions of the task force’s recommendations have focused on the administrative structure of University College. Discussion of the opportunities to improve student academic services has been conspicuously absent from the debate. The fact is that students will benefit from implementation of the task force’s recommendations. If the recommendations are not supported, the needs of students at Eastern are ignored.

The task force and Charles Evans have been criticized for not providing the university community with enough information about the proposal. The task force’s report and recommendations were distributed to the university community in February, 1996. Throughout Spring and Fall Semesters 1996, Evans and members of the task force visited with academic councils, Faculty Senate and Student Senate concerning the proposal. The minutes of these meetings have been widely circulated on the campus. The Student Senate passed a resolution on Oct. 23 which supported University College because it “offers an abundance of benefits to all students of Eastern Illinois University.”

The recommendations of the task force have been widely reviewed by all facets of our campus community. While disagreement continues concerning the name of the administrative unit or the title of the administrator, students continue to experience inconveniences, frustrations and barriers which impede progress toward their academic goals.

The recommendations of the task force concerning University College are about improving academic services to students. It is time to move forward on

Honors study abroad program needs re-evaluation

Although the proposed study abroad requirement for honors students has received less attention lately, it is still something that all students here at Eastern need to evaluate, because it does more than just affect students in the honors program. In short, the proposed plan calls for a class of about 20 students to attend a foreign university for a semester, along with a faculty adviser, as a graduation requirement for honors students.

I would like to address some of the hazy issues surrounding this plan, and perhaps offer a different perspective that has so far been overlooked by the majority.

Honors students have objected to the proposed program for a variety of reasons: the requirement that they participate, the cost of such a program and the difficulty of taking classes abroad. Such complaints sound to me like these people wish to remain at home.

It stands to reason that a student studying in a foreign land because of a mere academic requirement will not take full advantage of the program. Why should such a program be required of an honors student before a foreign language major who would participate voluntarily? Do we wish to breed elitism? I hope not, but as things stand, the situation is hardly fair. Administrators of the proposed program say the cost per student will be comparable to the cost of a semester at Eastern. Yes, such a program may ultimately cost the honors students the same amount of money as it does to go here for a semester, but it will cost Eastern much more. Although this is what students have been told, we haven't seen the solid proof of figures on paper.

What I still find hard to believe is that Eastern, certainly not renowned for its financial wizardry, has suddenly made it possible for the honors students to study abroad for the same amount of money as it takes to study here. I've spent time in Europe and will make the reasonable assumption that it takes an enormous amount of resources to ferry 20 people to Europe for almost five months. For the program to be advertised to honors students at such a super low price, Eastern will no doubt have to incur some considerable expense. There is no fair reason for Eastern to accept that huge financial burden unless program participation can be voluntary and exist for everyone beyond the relatively minuscule honors program. People who aren't in the honors program pay to go here, too, and this issue concerns them just as much as it does honors students.

Aside from the cost, administrators pushing the program have assured complaining students that classes at the foreign universities will be in English. I know of no Japanese students who would expect their classes here to be in Japanese, even for a semester. We would consider such a demand arrogant and unreasonable. Those who do not wish to learn the language of the country where they will study might as well remain at home; language comes with the territory of studying abroad. Also, if English is to be the primary language of instruction, what practical foreign linguistic knowledge will a student gain? Next to none, especially when the students will have an instructor and 19 classmates from their native land with home they can associate. And, without language, can one hope to fully learn culture? There will be no "immersion"; the trip abroad will be nothing but a glorified vacation.

Thus, Eastern will be instituting an expensive overseas program, when educating students in the United States can obtain the same results. Do we have money to burn?

Finally, we must question the motives of the administrators of this program. I do not suggest this out of paranoia, but out of prudence, for it is logical to question the motives of those who are so ambitious. Herbert Lasky, director of the honors program, and Roger Beck, graduate school dean, are the key figures in the construction of this requirement. For all intents and purposes, Eastern students were not at all involved in the decision making process surrounding this program – they were simply told. I will again make a reasonable assumption that many months are required to organize cooperative programs with foreign universities. How convenient that the "proposed" study abroad program was just waiting here for student acceptance at the start of the academic year. As soon as next semester, volunteer honors students will be leaving for Belgium to participate in the "pilot program" for overseas study. I find it difficult to swallow that those administrators who have the ability to organize a program with foreign institutions have neglected to completely communicate their intentions to their students at home who foot the bill.

Whether in the honors program or not, students here at Eastern have the ability to judge the merits of a proposal, but only when informed. How much of a decision have students had in this matter? Not only the failure to inform students, but the failure to accept their concerns and possible rejection of a decision does a great disservice to Eastern. The consequences of the behavior of the administrators surrounding this study abroad program are the destruction of trust between students and faculty, and an insult to the intelligence of the student body – something a university should promote beyond the interests of individual faculty members.

As students here, we have a say in the policies and programs that are instituted, as they are instituted for our benefit. If they offer no benefits in relation to the price we pay, we need to evaluate the need for such policies and program. Valid arguments by different people suggest this proposed study abroad be questioned, mainly because of its unfairness – it excludes most students. To finance such a program and force it upon honors students is simply a weak idea. I do not pay thousands of dollars to attend this university to finance the execution of weak ideas. Fellow students: if you don't like it, then don't accept it. Let's all get our money's worth.

Students should expect more from senate representatives

Student Senate is a social organization. For this, I apologize to the students that are idealistic enough to expect more from us.

I also extend sympathy to my fellow elected representatives who try so hard to make it something more than what it is.

Student Government is one aspect of Eastern's shared governance. What we have to remember is that the concept of shared governance is like voting in a democracy that elects its president by electoral college. A single vote like senate's can make a difference, but the people actually casting the electoral votes (the administrators) that make the decision are so far removed from the source that the single vote is laughably insignificant.

What I am trying to express is that the administration allows us to have a Student Government simply to comfort us. Its existence gives me the impression that my vote on the senate has an impact on their decisions. Its existence lets students delude themselves into thinking they have a voice, through my representation, in the overall scheme of things.

We are allowed to have a Student Government because its existence lets us think we are having input.

And it's not just Student Senate – the same is true of Faculty Senate, Staff Senate, the Council on University Planning and Budge and any other level of representative, decision making organization.

And it's not just here at Eastern, either – the same is true at College of DuPage, University of Illinois or any other institution that operates in the spirit of shared governance.

We are told that we are a part of a system. We may initiate measures, we may advise and evaluate and declare our opinions – but in the long run, we need to remember it's all just drops of water in a bucket.

Eventually, those drops of water collect into a fluent mass with the same essence of composition. Eventually, the bucket fills up and overflows.

But students need to have some sense of the whole picture – we need to realize how significant Student Senate really is.

JACKIE MCGRATH
Guest columnist
Student Senate member

When I say Student Senate is a social organization, I mean that its function right now is primarily interactive – not active. The difference is, we are a body that is supposed to inform truth, very limited as to what action we may take on those decisions and issues.

But the really hopeful thing – the thing students should applaud – is the fact that there are individuals they have elected to serve on senate who are making an effort to bridge the gap between significance and what we have now. There are senators taking their roles seriously, who are making an effort to transcend senate's traditional role, to convince the administration, the faculty, the staff and the students that this can be a body that carries weight and a sense of responsibility behind every decision it makes.

So what I am asking is not for students to lower their expectations of what Student Senate is supposed to do. Don't accept that senate is just a drop of water in the bucket, or a layer in the system. Rather, keep asking for more and better than what we're doing for you. Keep us responsible, keep us accountable for our actions. Expect us to fulfill our obligations to communicate, as students, with the rest of this school community. Students' high expectations will help Student Senate improve; there is no reason why this body cannot move on to a higher level.

Student Senate needs to become more than a social organization, and it is individual students who will make that happen. Keep adding your drops of water to the senate's bucket; maybe students' continued high expectations will help senate become a significant drop that can make the whole bucket overflow.

Students believe terrorism is important global issue

I conducted a survey on world affairs some time ago, and in the survey, I asked 30 students what they felt was the most pressing problem in international relations today. About 23 percent stated that international terrorism was the most pressing problem. Another 23 percent stated it was ethnic conflict. Recent incidents in the United States such as the pipe bombing of the Olympics in Atlanta, the downing of TWA Flight 800 and the apprehension of the Unabomber may have influenced the students who chose terrorism. Terrorism is not a grave threat to America, although America's infrastructure is very vulnerable. It would not take much to cause a blackout in New York City. Unfortunately, everything cannot be protected. However, the Clinton Administration has been adopting new measures to combat terrorism.

Currently U.S. counter-terrorism policy is based on three pillars. First, the United States will not make any deals with terrorists. Second, the United States pursues a strategy in persuading states from sponsoring terrorism. Third, the United States accords the rule of law on terrorists.

The first pillar has been U.S. policy since 1972 after the Munich Massacre, and it is designed to discourage terrorists from attacking and/or kidnapping American citizens. The United States will not negotiate with terrorists. However, the U.S. government will talk to anyone, anywhere, at any time on the welfare of the hostages and their unconditional release. When Iran revealed that the United States was trading arms for hostages, damage was done to this policy and the United States was opened to ridicule by its European allies. However, the United States has corrected the damage that was done.

The Libyan bombing on April 14, 1986, falls under the second pillar. The United States supposedly used every peaceful means to its disposal to persuade Libya to stop sponsoring terrorism. When this failed, the U.S. government was compelled to use force to convince Col. Mu'Ammar Qadhafi that supporting terrorism wasn't a good idea. The Libyan bombing of 1986 was successful in that Qadhafi has not renounced the use of terrorism, but the bombing has made him more cautious. However, if it is true that terrorism is community-based, i.e., terrorism arises from a community of people such as the Palestinians, then the bombing has not helped one iota in stopping terrorism. Even if Libya did stop sponsoring terrorism, the terrorists would find other states more than willing to support them, or they will resort to the old fashion way of making money through kidnapping or stealing it. They would be forced to slow down the pace of their attacks, but their attacks would be bloodier.

The third pillar is of extreme importance. The United States recognizes terrorists as criminals. Terrorists are not soldiers, guerrillas, commandos or "freedom fighters." For all of the above, only target military personnel or government officials, not innocent civilians. Terrorists do not deserve to be tried under military law. In order to increase the apprehension of terrorists, the United States has established cash rewards for information on the whereabouts of terrorists. Cooperating with friendly states in exchanging intelligence also assists in apprehending terrorists.

Removing the cause of terrorism is an effective way of sealing down terrorism. However, this is an utopian ideal. The recent establishment of Palestinian homeland out of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank has helped to curb Palestinian terrorism. But the peace that has been established in the Middle East is threatened by the policies of the new Israeli government. It is within the interests of the international community to assist in the establishment of a truly sovereign Palestinian state. After all, something is better than nothing and with the majority of Palestinians pleased with their new found freedom it would be difficult for the radical fringe to recruit a new generation of terrorists.

Comedic opera to be performed

By JEFF HAYES
Staff writer

Eastern's Music Theater/Opera workshop, under the direction of Jerry Daniels, associate professor of music, will have a chance to shine Tuesday night as its members present "An Evening of Opera Scenes."

The evening of music and comedy will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Dvorak Concert Hall in the Doudna Fine Arts Center.

There is no charge for admission to the performance.

The production will consist of sections from Christoph Willibald Gluck's "Orpheus and Euridice" and portions of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" and "Pirates of Penzance."

"We are taking essential bits of opera and capturing it on stage," said Callie Thompson, senior vocal performance major.

"Opera is a form of entertainment that allows you to use your imagination, it's not like letting the television spit entertainment at you," said Thompson, who is portraying the character Euridice in the production.

"It's real life, real people on stage."

Thompson said the cast and crew of the production have spent all semester perfecting their roles and assignments, and are hoping for a large crowd to help make their efforts worth while.

"People get nervous when they hear the word opera," Thompson said.

"We are actually up there trying to make you feel comfortable."

Thompson said for people who are interested, yet are intimidated by opera, a synopsis of each scene can be found in their program.

"It will help them enjoy the performance," Thompson said.

City to authorize tourism funding

The Charleston City Council is expected to pass a resolution authorizing more than $12,000 requested by the Charleston Tourism Advisory Board at their meeting tonight.

The city council will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building, at 520 Jackson Ave.

The funds will pay for several different items. The Charleston Tourism Advisory Board requested $9,500 for the Red, White and Blue Days in July to pay for Vince and the Valiants to perform a concert during the celebration. The board also requested $2,200 for the Central Illinois Tourism Council Visitor's Guide to be published and $1,034 for the publication of the Shelbyville Vacation Guide. The total amount requested by the board is $12,734.

The council is also expected to consider an ordinance to install a yield sign at the intersection of Bryan and 13th streets. The ordinance would require Bryan Street traffic to yield to traffic on 13th Street.

Mourners say farewell to Cardinal

CHICAGO (AP) — Hours before his body was brought to Holy Name Cathedral, mourners began lining up Monday to pay their last respects to Cardinal Joseph Bernardin.

By the time a motorcade brought Bernardin's body and a small group of close friends and relatives from the cardinal's residence, 1,000 people jammed the sidewalks in front of the cathedral.

"I wanted to make sure I had an opportunity to show my respects," said Audrey Coleman, 53, clutching a photo of the cardinal, who died at age 68 last week of pancreatic cancer.

The faithful made signs of the cross as the hearse drew up.

Accompanying the motorcade on its half-mile procession were 100 bell ringers from parishes throughout the archdiocese.

"I heard he wrapped seven Christmas presents (in the days before he died)," one woman whispered to another. "And he sent out Christmas cards with personal messages."

Students charged with baby's death

FRANKLIN LAKES, N.J. (AP) — They were high school sweethearts from well-to-do families who went off to college with promising futures — and a secret.

That secret came out only after Amy Grossberg and Brian Peterson Jr. went to a budget motel not far from the University of Delaware, where Grossberg gave birth to a baby who was later found dead in a trash bin out back.

Now, the 18-year-olds are charged with murder and could get the death penalty.

Prosecutors are trying to learn just what happened in that motel room, but Peterson has allegedly admitted leaving the newborn in the trash in a gray plastic bag after helping deliver the baby at the Comfort Inn in Newark, Del., on Nov. 12, and the medical examiner said the boy died of a skull fracture.

"Good kids involved in a bad situation," in the words of Charles Slanina, Grossberg's lawyer. "We don't believe Amy did anything wrong." At Ramapo High School in the prosperous suburbs of New York City, Grossberg was a budding artist, he the co-captain of the soccer team. Their yearbook shows the two good-looking teens smiling together at a school dance. Under Grossberg's individual portrait is the quote: "Friends may come and go, but those who truly love you will never leave you." They parted for college — she went to the University of Delaware in Newark, he to Gettysburg College, less than three hours away in Pennsylvania.

Colleagues at her high school and college told The New York Times that they were unaware she was pregnant.

Prosecutors and lawyers for the two teens would divulge few details or discuss a motive in the slaying of the infant, who was found in the freezing cold before daybreak the next day.

Investigators had not determined if the baby suffered the fatal skull injury before or after being put into the trash.

After giving birth, Grossberg returned to her dorm. It was when she was hospitalized for apparent complications that authorities learned a baby was missing. Grossberg told authorities that Peterson had helped her.

CIA agent charged with selling secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — A onetime CIA station chief was charged Monday with selling top secrets to the Russians for more than $120,000.

The FBI suspects that the highest-ranking CIA officer ever charged with espionage sold the identities of all new CIA agent trainees in the past two years.

The 16-year CIA veteran, Harold J. Nicholson, 46, of Burke, Va., "betrayed his country for money. He was not motivated by ideology but by greed," said U.S. Attorney Helen Fahey.

"He had access to a great deal of very damaging information."

An FBI affidavit said that Nicholson had access to the biographies and assignments of every new CIA agent trained from July 1994 to July 1996, when he taught at the CIA's secret Virginia training site, and that evidence strongly indicated Nicholson sold the material to the Russians.

"As a result of this disclosure, it will be difficult, if not impossible, for the CIA to place some of these newly trained case officers into certain sensitive foreign postings for the rest of their careers," said FBI Agent Michael Lonergan's affidavit.

Crossing the border proves fatal for four people

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — High waves swallowed up a group of men, women and children who apparently were trying to wade across the Rio Grande into the United States, drowning at least four of them. Six others were feared dead.

Authorities searched for the bodies of those killed in the Gulf of Mexico surf at the shallow mouth of the river. Two of the victims carried passports from Pakistan.

Witnesses saw about 10 men, women and children at the river's mouth about 20 miles east of Brownsville on Sunday, Chief Sheriff's Deputy Joe Elizardi said.

"They were walking on a sandbar on the Mexican side. When they got to the end of the sandbar, this large wave came in and swallowed them up," he said.

Authorities believe the group was trying to reach the U.S. side of the river, Elizardi said.

The mouth of the river is generally shallow, with shoals and sandbars that prevent large ships from entering, although in places it's too deep for wading.

Waves were up to 10 feet high along the shore Sunday, and that could have created a powerful rip current that would have pulled the victims away from land, said National Weather Service forecaster Richard Hagan. Waves there normally run 3 to 4 feet, Elizardi said.

"A single wave is not enough normally to carry somebody off and drown them," Hagan said.

NATO plans peace-keeping force

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) – NATO’s military chiefs received their marching orders Monday: Begin planning for a new force of up to 30,000 troops to keep the peace in Bosnia while the country continues to rebuild.

The North Atlantic Council, the alliance’s top policymaking body, told Gen. George Joulwan and his staff at NATO headquarters to create an operations plan for a multinational force half the size of the one sent to Bosnia nearly a year ago.

The mandate for the current force, which at its peak numbered just under 60,000, expires Dec. 20. The new one will include about 8,500 Americans and may stay on for another 18 months.

There had been a consensus that a military force would be needed in Bosnia well beyond Dec. 20., but NATO couldn’t go ahead until the United States announced its decision to participate, which President Clinton did Friday.

The Council had to choose from among four options: Total withdrawal, a small deterrence force to prevent an outbreak of fighting, a “deterrence-plus” force capable of a wider mission, and continuation of the present force. No serious consideration was given to the first or last option.

Ambassadors instructed military planners to begin work on the basis of the third option, which includes continuing with the military task of providing a stable environment in Bosnia while providing some support to the civilian reconstruction and reconciliation mission.

However, a smaller force will mean the troops can provide less help to the civilian side headed by former Swedish Prime Minister Carl Bildt.

Russian’s lack funds to replace spacecraft

MOSCOW (AP) – With their Mars spacecraft lost in the Pacific Ocean, Russia’s beleaguered space scientists tried to pinpoint what went wrong and conceded Monday they don’t have the money for another try.

Space officials, looking haggard after two sleepless nights, could not say precisely what caused the collapse of Mars ‘96, which came crashing down in several parts somewhere near Easter Island.

But the spacecraft, designed to reach Mars next September, never made it out of Earth’s orbit after the rocket’s fourth-stage engine failed to provide enough speed.

“It has hit the whole space program hard,” Yuri Milov, deputy director of the Russian Space Agency, told a news conference. “We don’t plan any other mission of the kind.” Russia’s space program has been struggling since the 1991 Soviet breakup, and the impoverished Russians gambled a large chunk of their meager resources on Mars ‘96. With its failure, there is no prospect of any major new missions in the foreseeable future.

Milov said the Russians would cooperate on Mars research with the United States, which plans 10 missions to the red planet over the next decade. He said the two sides would begin discussing details in December.

U.S. opposes second term of Boutros-Ghali

UNITED NATIONS (AP) – The United States stood alone Monday in opposing a second term for Boutros Boutros-Ghali as the Security Council met to pick a secretary-general to lead the United Nations into the 21st century.

U.S. Ambassador Madeleine Albright told the 14 other council members at a closed-door meeting that she had written instructions to veto re-election for the Egyptian diplomat, saying Boutros-Ghali has lost the confidence of Congress.

Albright warned that Congress would not let the United States make good on its $1 billion U.N. debt as long as Boutros-Ghali remains, diplomats said on condition of anonymity.

The council’s first-round vote on the job was expected as early as Monday night.

“There’s only one delegation that opposes a second term for Boutros-Ghali and that delegation wants a vote,” British Ambassador John Weston said. “I see no good reason why we shouldn’t” vote.

African diplomats, who support Boutros-Ghali as a fellow African, huddled privately to decide what to do if the veto is cast. The Africans have insisted that their continent deserves two terms of representation in the post, as has been U.N. tradition.

A U.S. official, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, said Secretary of State Warren Christopher had given Albright written instructions to deny Boutros-Ghali a new five-year term after his first expires Dec. 31.

“We had tried very hard over the last six months to try to avoid a confrontation on the question of the next secretary-general,” the official said.

“Fairly or unfairly, based on misinformation or true information, our Congress has lost confidence in this secretary-general,” he said.

Those who care about the United Nations “should understand that his re-election would make it virtually impossible for us to obtain the hundreds of millions of dollars that we need to pay back the United Nations,” the official said.

Documents show arms sales

GOMA, Zaire (AP) – A British-based company supplied arms and ammunition to the former Rwandan government after it began slaughtering a half-million of its own people in 1994, according to documents that Hutu militias left behind when they retreated in eastern Zaire.

The documents, made available to The Associated Press on Monday, indicated the Rwandan government bought more than $5.5 million worth of machine guns, mortars, grenades, ammunition and other military hardware from the company, Mil-Tec Corp., between April and July 1994.

Some shipments appeared to contravene a U.N. embargo on exporting arms to Rwanda, imposed in May 1994 following acts of genocide by the former Hutu-led government against minority Tutsis and moderate Hutus.

A U.N. Commission of Inquiry has been investigating a British company for allegedly supplying arms to the ex-Hutu government or its militia allies after they fled to Zaire.

Middle Tennessee facing several challenges

By JOSH HARBECK
Associate sports editor

With three starters returning and a new head coach, Middle Tennessee is still trying to find the right mix for the 1996-97 season.

Randy Wiel was named coach of the year in the Big South Conference last season, leading the University of North Carolina-Ashville to an 18-10 record.

He said the move to Middle Tennessee, with the new players and coach, presents a new set of challenges.

“All I can say is the players are working hard,” he said.

“We are a little handicapped by not having the size I’d like to have.”

Weil said the taller players he had signed fell through due to academics.

The Raider head coach played his college basketball at North Carolina from 1975-79.

During his four years, the Tarheels won four ACC championships, two ACC tournament championships and made a trip to the Final Four.

Weil said his success in college has helped him as a head coach.

“Most of the time your philosophy as a coach comes from your experiences in playing,” he said. “Of course, you need to adjust to your personnel.”

Middle Tennessee has a chance to see North Carolina up close when it travels to Chapel Hill Feb. 1 to play Dean Smith’s Tarheels.

The Blue Raiders have been in the OVC for 44 years, but Middle has four league championships.

The team’s overall record in the OVC is 250-332.

The Raiders last won a regular season championship during the 1988-89 season.

That year was the last time a Blue Raider team appeared in

	Middle Tennessee State University
Head coach Randy Weil First year at MTSU	1995-96: 15-12, 9-7 OVC 1996-97 prediction: Fourth place in OVC

the NCCA tournament – and the team had success.

Middle Tennessee played its first-round game against Florida State.

The Raiders trailed by 17 points (67-50) with 16 minutes left in the game, but outscored the Seminoles 47-16 for the remainder of the contest to pull the comeback upset 97-83.

Middle was knocked out in the second round by Virginia 104-88.

Last season, the Raiders finished fourth in the conference with a 9-7 record in the league (15-12 overall), and Weil hopes to build on that success.

“It was a totally different team last year, so we have to take the wins and losses as they come,” he said.

Returning to Middle Tennessee this season are two of last year’s starters, both seniors and all of whom scored over 10 points per game last year.

Guard Nod Carter is back for his senior year with the Raiders. He led the team with 15.1 points per game and was named to the All-OVC second team last year.

He was also the conference’s best free throw shooter at 88.1 percent, which ranked him seventh nationally.

“We have to have leadership from Nod and (Roni) Bailey,” Weil said.

“Last year he played forward, but we played an exhibition game and he started at center. It’s a different role for him, but he’s adjusting well.”

Senior guard Roni Bailey returns for his third year in the Blue Raider backcourt.

His 10.4 points per game average was good for fourth on the team last season.

He was also the second leading rebounder with 5.3 per game.

Senior forward Aylton Tesch was an All-OVC newcomer as well as an honorable mention All-OVC selection last season. He was third on the team in scoring with 13.3 points per game.

Tesch was in the top 10 in the OVC in rebounding, field goal percentage and steals.

But this year, he will redshirt.

The Raiders also have fresh talent, especially in freshman Freddy Martinez.

Last season, Martinez helped four different teams to four different championships and earned four MVP awards.

Middle Tennessee takes on the Panthers in Murfreesboro on Jan. 20 before traveling to Charleston on Feb. 15 for a game in Lantz.

Colonels hoping to compete for OVC crown

By MATT WILSON
Staff writer

The Lady Colonels of Eastern Kentucky are picked to be right where they finished last year.

After finishing in a fourth-place tie with Tennessee Tech, both teams finished 7-9 in the conference, the Golden Eagles are picked to finish fourth in the conference again.

“We have better depth and a better all-around team than last year,” head coach Larry Inman said. “We also have more experience. Last year we had four freshman. They’ve worked very hard in the off-season and have a year under their belt.”

Eastern Kentucky has one main goal this year.

“Teamwise we’re hoping to be competitive for an OVC championship,” Inman said. “We had a rough year last year with a couple of injuries, but this year we have good depth. If we stay healthy, we should be very competitive.”

Inman is the most experienced of the coaches in the Ohio Valley Conference. He is the winningest women’s basketball coach at both Eastern Kentucky and Middle Tennessee State. His overall record in the OVC is 142-57.

The Lady Colonels will be led by first team All-OVC selection junior center Laphelia Doss.

She grabbed 310 rebounds last year for an average of 11.5 rebounds per game. Doss was the OVC’s leading rebounder and was ninth in the nation.

She was also second on the team with 398 points and averaged 14.7 points per game.

Also returning for the Colonels are senior twin guards Stephany and Tiffany Davis.

A knee injury sidelined Stephany last year but she is back in good form this year.

In the 1994-95 season, she averaged 11.4 points per game, 4.2 rebounds per game and 2.2 assists per game.

Tiffany played a big role in last year’s team. She was second on the team with 47 offensive rebounds, fifth on the team with 92 total rebounds, and scored 172 points for an average of 6.4 points per game.

Junior guard-forward Tina Goodrich will be another starter on the Colonels. She is only one of three Colonels to average in double figures last year with an average of 13.3 points per game. She also shot 60 percent from the foul line last year.

Rounding out the starting five for the Colonels is three-point threat junior forward Lisa Pace.

Out of the five starters, Pace is the one who made the most three-pointers last year. She made 52 of 131 threes for an average of 39.7 percent.

She was also third on the team with 112 defensive rebounds and second 146 total rebounds. She was also third on the team with 261 total points and fourth on the team

	Eastern Kentucky University
Head coach Larry Inman (117-99) at MSU	1995-96: 11-16, 7-9 OVC 1996-97 prediction: Fourth place in OVC with 9.7 points per game.

Joining the Colonels this year will be University of Kentucky transfer Chrissy Roberts, second team All-America selection junior forward Laurel Friedman and first team all-state selection freshman guard Marla Gearhart.

Inman is very excited about Eastern coming into the conference.

“Eastern has a great program and I think they’ll enjoy the conference,” he said.

“I feel Eastern will enjoy this conference because it’s competitive, but there are no cut-throat types of coaches.”

Inman also expects this to be a very competitive conference this year.

“Our conference has a lot of balance and on any night somebody will be capable of beating you,” he said.

“This conference is rich in competition and there is no more total domination. Every night you have to go out ready to play.”

straight victory and setting up the opportunity to knock off OVC powerhouse Eastern Kentucky this Saturday afternoon to grab on to their second straight playoff bid, the Panthers are now left facing the problem of where does the team go from here.

By observing the football players’ reactions in the locker room after the game, I can assure you that they aren’t good things that are going to happen. Believe me, the looks of disbelief on some of the players’ faces gave away the fact that this loss hurt bad and that it probably left a not so good taste in their mouths.

Still, there will be practice this week and there will be a game this Saturday afternoon. Nothing in that respect is going to change.

What is going to change, though, is what this game will actually mean since the shot at a playoff bid is very, very, very – did I say very – slim. Not only would the Panthers have to knock off the Colonels in convincing fashion, but they would also have to get more help than the New York Jets need right about now to get into the playoffs.

To say the least, the Panther football team should have never gotten to this point because it should have beaten Middle Tennessee with all of the chances it had during the game to do it.

Of course, there is no way to change the past so now the Panthers must learn from the mistakes that have been made and do everything they can to avoid them next year.

If anything can be said, it’s that the game of football is an interesting one isn’t it?

Harper garners OVC honor

By MATT WILSON
Staff writer

For the fourth time this year, an Eastern volleyball player has been named the Ohio Valley Conference player of the week. Instead of it being Vanessa Wells, though, the award has been given to junior setter Kara Harper.

"It's good that someone got the award before the tournament," Harper said. "Our team is on a six-game winning streak and we're ready to go kick some butt in the tournament."

Harper helped the Panthers go 3-0 this past week by dishing out 152 assists in 13 games. She also had 51 digs and 20 kills to help the Panthers get the second seed in the OVC tournament this weekend.

Also in this past week Harper broke the EIU career assist record previously held by Amy Van Eekeren, who had 3,811. Harper has 3,905 career assists.

Head coach Betty Ralston is very pleased with the honor.

"It's great to get this on the last week of play and the last week they have this out," she said. "It's also nice to get somebody recognized besides Vanessa."

Kara Harper

Harper does not take full credit for this award.

"It's more a reflection on our hitter because you can't get assists without them," she said.

Ralston said that Harper winning this award will not give the team any respect, because they have already gotten it.

"We earned respect by the way we played our first year," she said.

"The preseason poll was more on pride and not wanting to see someone new do well. Middle, Tech and Morehead were picked to finish at the top and us and Austin Peay beat them. This is a league that tends to vary from year to year."

ATTITUDE

Besides the turnovers, Eastern also gave up several big plays in Saturday's contest that resulted in touchdowns, including a 67-yard touchdown toss from Ronnie Gordon to Demetric Mostiller.

"The key was the turnovers because they were totally unexpected and they really surprised us," Spoo said. "We just can't do that against any team."

Praamsma was quick to point out that the team was angry about the turnovers and the other mistakes that were made in Saturday's contest, particularly because Eastern knew it was the better team going into the game.

"We were really mad at ourselves," he said. "We knew we were the better team, but this is a new week and a new game and we have to focus on winning Saturday."

And with the Panthers needing a win to keep their shrinking playoff hopes alive, Spoo expects the team to come out ready to play against an Eastern Kentucky team that has been to the play-offs 16 out of the 18 years the I-AA playoffs have been in place.

"We'll be ready to play on Saturday," he said. "I expect us to come out fighting and play to win."

Praamsma added that he expects nothing less than to see the team prepared for Saturday's football game at O'Brien Stadium.

"Of course we are going to be ready," he said. "Our backs have been forced against the wall and we would have had to beat Eastern Kentucky anyways regardless of what would have happened against Middle Tennessee."

Practice won't change either.

It is going to be a normal week," Praamsma said. "There will probably be a little more intensity because we'll be playing for all the seniors on the team."

The Panthers will take on Eastern Kentucky this Saturday afternoon in Charleston at 1:30 p.m. The Colonels are 6-1 in the OVC while Eastern is 5-2 in the conference.

HITTING

middle blocker Rachel Johnson hitting .462 and sophomore setter Emily Bell hitting .429, but they also had four players to hit .000 or below.

Sommer said that a key to her good hitting was the good passing.

"I'm going to take fewer repetitions this week in practice until my shoulder gets better," she said.

"The OVC is not strong in the middle so if we get some good passing our middles should do well."

Ralston said that there is some parts of the hitting game that the team still has to work on before the conference tournament.

"A few hitters are not getting off the court fast enough for their approach," she said. "We also need to be able to hit more than one shot."

Eastern knows that they are going to play the winner of the Eastern Kentucky University and Tennessee State game in the first round of the conference tournament.

Holtz out as Notre Dame head coach

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) – The Lou Holtz era is over at Notre Dame.

The coach will announce at his weekly news conference Tuesday that he's resigning after 11 seasons.

Details were completed at a meeting Monday with athletic director Mike Wadsworth and the Rev. William Beauchamp, the university's executive vice president.

"He met with the administration and told them he's leaving," one of two university sources, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, told The Associated Press.

School spokesman John Heisler declined to confirm Holtz's resignation, saying only he had met with Wadsworth and Beauchamp.

Wadsworth declined comment, and Beauchamp was not immediately available.

Panthers left playoff hopes in Tennessee

There is a song by singer Tony Bennett called "I Left My Heart in San Francisco."

Well, the Panthers didn't leave their hearts in San Francisco, as far as I know.

However, down in Murfreesboro, Tenn. Saturday afternoon, the Panther football team all but left its playoff hopes at Middle Tennessee after dropping a 31-24 Ohio Valley Conference decision to the Blue Raiders.

Yes, the Panthers were favored to win Saturday's football game and they should have. However, they simply didn't win it because they failed to execute when it counted.

The three interceptions thrown by quarterback Mike Simpson – two of them coming during late fourth-quarter scoring drives that could have knotted the game at 31-31 – certainly didn't help in any way.

Those picks basically shot the Panthers right in the foot, the leg, the head and even the arm. I think you get the point.

But blaming the loss on the interceptions alone would not be fair.

There were also the three fumbles the Panthers had in the game.

I'm no football expert, but combining the three fumbles with the three interceptions does not really add up to a win.

Also, coming out about as flat as pop that has been sitting out for two days didn't help the Panthers cause either on Saturday afternoon.

This flatness was partly due to the fact that head coach Bob Spoo said the guys just didn't have the intensity he would have liked all week in practice.

And it did show because during Eastern's first two drives of the game, the Panthers were intercepted and went three and out.

After Middle Tennessee went up 7-0, the Panthers fumbled on their next drive instead of tying the game.

Just to show how slow Eastern was in getting out of the gate in the opening 15 minutes, the Panthers only had the ball for a mere 4:32 while only chalking up 21 yards.

By halftime, the Panthers had only racked up 90 yards of offense – their lowest halftime output of their four-game road swing.

So now the big question is what happens next?

Instead of getting their fourth

Panthers keep focus on weekend

Mindset of team unchanged after 31-24 setback

With the smoke clearing from the bomb that had been dropped on Eastern's playoff hopes after a 31-24 loss to Middle Tennessee Saturday afternoon, there are plenty of questions that have to be answered.

But while the play of the offense and defense will have to be analyzed by the coaches and players, the mental attitude of the team after this loss is also a concern.

Reason being is that the Panthers' game against Eastern Kentucky this Saturday afternoon was supposed to decide whether or not the Panthers extend their season.

But since Eastern lost to Middle Tennessee, the odds of making the playoffs are slim, as the coaching staff had stressed the importance of winning out the rest of the season.

And head coach Bob Spoo was quick to mention that he let the team know right away about the situation it is in going into the Eastern Kentucky game.

"They know it's a different ballgame and Eastern Kentucky is one of the better teams in I-AA football," Spoo said Monday night.

"We talked about the slim chance of making the playoffs and we really expect an effort from the get go on Saturday. We can't wait for the second half to start playing."

As for the attitude of the team after Monday's practice, Spoo said it was somewhat difficult to interpret.

"It was hard to tell," he said. "The team was somewhat subdued but we went through the workout as we normally would."

Junior fullback Conrad Praamsma added that the team's attitude was not as bad as one would expect since there is still a slight possibility the Panthers could make the playoffs.

"The players had a pretty good attitude," Praamsma said.

"It was a normal practice like every other week and we know we have to beat Eastern Kentucky in order to have a chance at making the playoffs."

While the team's focus is still the same, there are still aspects that need to be worked on.

For starters, the Panthers turned the football over a season-high six times despite racking up more passing (308-238) and rushing (170-121) yards than Middle Tennessee.

Going into Saturday's conference showdown, the Panthers were plus 13 in the turnover margin.

On the other hand, the Blue Raiders only turned the ball over once in the game, and that came in early in the second half.

Spikers' hitting influential in victories

One of the big reasons for the Panther volleyball team's success this weekend was their hitting percentages.

"We have been concentrating with our passing because with better passing comes better hitting," head coach Betty Ralston said.

On Friday in their victory over Eastern Kentucky University, the Panthers had a hitting percentage of .207 while the Colonels hit .128.

Even in their first game loss, the Panthers outhit Eastern Kentucky .210-.182.

Games three and four are when the hitting percentages really started to differentiate.

In game three, the Panthers hit .289 compared to Eastern Kentucky's .122. In game four, Eastern hit .231 while the Colonels hit .071.

Many people hit very well for the Panthers in this match.

Junior outside hitter Lindsey Celba lead the team with a .444 hitting percentage while freshman outside hitter Meleah Cutler hit for a .243 average.

Senior outside hitter Shelby Addington lead the Colonels with a .319 average, but the closest player to Addington's average was freshman middle blocker Kelly Smith who hit .130.

Eastern continued their hitting success in their victory over Morehead State University on Saturday outhitting them .201 to .164.

The one game that the Panthers lost they were outhit. Morehead State won game one and hit .209 compared to Eastern's .145. Eastern hitting success really came out in game three when they hit .243 compared to the Lady Eagles -.026.

hitter Lori Sommer hit .372 against Morehead State.

"I struggled against Eastern Kentucky because they had a really good blocker," Sommer said.

"The next day I was determined to find more holes and get the ball down."

Cutler had another good hitting day, hitting for a .280 average this time.

"Kara (Harper) made some really good sets and when Cari (Stuchly) came in, she also did very well," Cutler said.
